

CHINESE START LOCAL CHAMBER; CHU GEM IS HEAD

New Commercial Organization Has 150 Members; Open Headquarters Wednesday

Starting with a membership of 150 prominent Chinese merchants and business men of the city, the Honolulu Chinese Chamber of Commerce is now being organized, and will take up its headquarters for business next Wednesday morning in a building on Maunakea street opposite the Asahi theater. The following officers have been elected:

Chu Gem, president; Chee Kim Fook, vice-president; Ching Sal, secretary, and Wong Chow, treasurer. Chu Gem, the president, is one of the old-time Chinese of the city, being manager of the Quong Sam Kee store on King street. Ching Sal, secretary, is manager of the Oahu Rice Mill on Beretania street, and Wong Chow, treasurer, is manager of Yee Wo Chan Company.

"As far as I know we do not intend to try and affiliate in any way with the regular Chamber of Commerce," said Chu Gem today. "Our trade is so much different from the trade of the American business men that there is no likelihood of any need that we should work on close lines. Practically all of our goods come from the Orient."

"We hope to serve a purpose outside of service to our own people, however, by giving information concerning various trade relations between this country and China, when such questions may come up for discussion."

"So far we have a membership of about 150 persons and have our rooms fixed up in good style ready for occupancy next Wednesday."

WILL STAMP OUT TUBERCULOSIS IN CATTLE IN YEAR

uary meeting of the board this morning.

In 1915 a total of 7004 cows were tested, 6788 of which passed, with 216 condemned. "This increase of condemned animals can largely be accounted for by the large total, 45 animals, condemned on ranches tested for the first time," says Mr. Case's report in part. "Of the 216 animals condemned, only 10 remain alive at the present writing and these are carefully segregated awaiting slaughter." The percentage condemned was 3.08.

In December 2495 animals were tested, of which 2482 were passed and 13 condemned and 13 condemned and 13 condemned.

The offer of F. O. Bonfilis, one of the owners of the Denver Post, to stock Oahu at his own expense with song birds, was referred to the board's entomologists, so that an investigation may be made of the possible effects of introducing the birds here.

A trial of birds to Mr. Bonfilis for his generous offer was unanimously accepted. The birds he proposes to import are robins, blue birds, meadow larks and mocking birds.

Toasties are bits of hard, white Indian Corn, first carefully cooked, then rolled thin and crinkly, and toasted to a delicate, appetizing brown.

Not a hand touches the food in manufacture, and it is ready to serve direct from the packet—to be eaten with cream or milk—and sugar, if desired.

BENEFITS FROM BIG RAINS WILL LAST FOR YEARS

Ewa Plantation Said to Be Special Gainer; Level of Artesian Water is Raised

Though the heavy rains of the last month have in many localities seriously damaged standing cane, have in some cases washed out whole fields, and though the excess of moisture is expected to result in some deterioration of the juices in this year's crop, the total damage will probably be far exceeded by the immense benefits which will be derived from the rains, and which will total a large round figure.

The mountains are full of water, and stream flows which in the past have proved inadequate for proper irrigation in some districts will probably be ample all during the next season. Nature's storage reservoirs are filled as never before by the deep soaking of the ground, for though the floods were excessive only a minor portion of the precipitation found its way to the sea in surface flows.

Ewa plantation, say local men, is a good illustration of how the cane industry will benefit from the rains. When artesian water was first found there the level was about 31.6 feet above mean sea level. Pumping for irrigation for many years has gradually lowered this level until three months ago it had registered a total loss of about 18 feet, and stood only about 13 feet above sea level.

Water Level is Rising. On Monday of this week, say reports from the plantations, the artesian water level had reached the highest point in years, having gained 13 or 14 feet, and being then only about five feet below the original level of 31.6.

Another benefit to Ewa has been the washing of all the deleterious salts from the soil. The Ewa artesian flow is slightly brackish, and this water flooded over the cane fields for years, and quickly evaporated by the sun, has left an alkaline deposit which, however small in each year, has presented a growing problem. This problem the drenching rain has solved, by dissolving and washing away in surface flows all the salts, and greatly freshening the soil.

The raising of the artesian level has also lessened the brackishness of the water which will be pumped for the next year or two, besides giving the new immense reserve supply.

Other plantations, it is said, have been benefited similarly from the big rains.

FELIX MADE MONEY BY "SITTING IN" ON GAME

Playing a week ago in a game of 7-11 in a tenement house on Maunakea street, near Hotel, and acting today as witness for the prosecution, Felix Michael also picked up 40 odd dollars during the game by betting the other players at shooting craps.

All of the other men were fined yesterday from $5 to $7 in the police court. Those arrested were Frank Rosa, C. L. Jones, C. A. Sutton, H. Brown, Tagawa, Deane, Murakami, Watanabe, Kukino, Makaohe, H. Chalmers, Apo, and Ah Sung.

Sheriff Paul Stier, who has built more than $1,000,000 worth of houses in Queens County, New York, shocked his subordinates and all the politicians of Queens by starting to run his office on strictly business principles.

M'CARN TRYING TO GET ANOTHER JOB IN HAWAII?

Court Circles Think He Would Like to Return "With Brass Band as Conqueror"

If Jeff McCarn emerges victorious from the fight he is now waging on District Attorney Horace W. Vaughan in the department of justice, will he seek an appointment to a federal position in Hawaii and come back to Honolulu "with a brass band and in the guise of the conquering hero," as one well-known local attorney stated today?

While no quotable statements have been made for publication bearing directly on this question, still this appears to be the belief of several federal officials here who have become interested in the situation, and especially since it has been reported that the department of justice is to send a special agent here to investigate Mr. Vaughan's conduct in office.

General sentiment in the community seems to be that the fight is between McCarn and Vaughan and that so long as it continues to be, there is no reason for Honolulu to revive the old McCarn simonies.

"I have no objection," Mr. Vaughan says, "to any investigation which the department of justice may conduct into the affairs of the office of the district attorney here."

"Every one here should realize that this is McCarn's fight against me. I do not believe the people of Hawaii wish to line up with McCarn in his fight against me."

"However, this is a fight between McCarn and me."

The Star-Bulletin was told today by a Honolulu who is well-informed as to McCarn's movements and plans that the former district attorney is not trying to defeat the confirmation of Chief Justice Robertson or Circuit Judge Whitney, as reported yesterday.

"As a matter of fact, while McCarn did not recommend Judge Robertson, he spoke highly of him in Washington, and this is one of the causes of the split between McCarn and Justice Quarles," said this man. "I am sure that McCarn is not trying to defeat the confirmation of either of these judges. He also spoke highly of Judge Whitney's juvenile court work."

He was also of the opinion that McCarn's charges against Vaughan have been so explicit, that the department will send an investigator here.

MACAULAY TELLS ABOUT SAILING SHIP DAYS

A mail dispatch to the Star-Bulletin Saturday from its Hilo correspondent, telling of a recent meeting here between Capt. Mosher, pilot at Hilo, and his old friend of windjamming days, Capt. Creelman, whom he had not seen in many years, today led Capt. John R. Macaulay, one of the territorial pilots in Honolulu, to take exception to a phrase in the story which said the two talked "until the Oahu pilots began to think they did not know much about the real deep sea."

This phrase naturally grieved Capt. Macaulay, who has followed the deep sea for several decades and sailed over the deepest oceans the round globe possesses before he became a pilot here.

"Capt. Mosher forgot to tell you Hilo correspondent that Capt. Creelman and I were both sailing at the same time, in the same employ, out of Boston, under the Henry Hastings house flag," said Capt. Macaulay this morning. "It was an emblem consisting of the letters H. H. on a white ground."

New York to Melbourne. "My first boat in the Henry Hastings' employ was the ship Springfield, in 1871, sailing from New York to Melbourne via the Cape of Good Hope, and from Melbourne to San Francisco. Later I joined the North American, which had a figurehead on the bow of an American Indian with a tomahawk."

"While I was on the North American, Capt. Creelman was master of the ship Cutwater, one of the Henry Hastings' line of clipper ships, boats that made Yankee skippers and ship-owners famous throughout the world."

"After I left the North American Capt. Tucker, her old skipper, retired, and Capt. Creelman relieved him. At the time I speak of, 1879, the North American was considered by shipping men of Great Britain the finest ship ever entering the port of Liverpool."

After he left the North American, Capt. Macaulay joined the Sewalls' employ, out of Bath, Maine.

Capt. Creelman is staying at the Royal Hawaiian hotel. When he learned, during the meeting with Capt. Mosher, that Capt. Macaulay, who was also present, had served under the same house flag, although they had never been together on the same ship, he was visibly affected, and the two recalled many incidents of the old days before steam had superseded wind as motive power for merchant vessels. Capt. Creelman is 84 years old.

Fewer people under 20 and more people over 45 are now employed in various industries than was the case 10 years ago.

The number of families under care during the fiscal year numbered 556, and the total number of individuals cared for numbered 2156. The social state of the persons cared for is outlined as follows:

Married couples, 301; widows, 47; widowers, 8; orphan families, 2; resident single men, 105; transient single men, 54; single women, 16; deserted families, 23.

The nationality of persons cared for was as follows:

Mr. Brooks supplemented the statistical report by an oral discussion of the general situation. He said, in part:

Will Continue To Grow.

"The work has grown steadily through the year, and there is every indication that it will continue to grow. There is much dependence in the city that is being ministered to by private individuals who would feel safer and wiser to have such work done by this society if they were assured that it would be done by us kindly, wisely and promptly. We are endeavoring all the while to give such assurance."

"We stand with our doors wide open to receive every application and attend to every need that is pointed out to us. If there is need for immediate relief, we give it immediately. Then we try to find out the cause of the need and remove it. We make the kindest, most confidential investigations that are possible, and refuse, as far as our intelligence can carry us, to be made accessory to people's willingness to lose their self-respect."

"A wide-open door to every appeal must be the policy of every true charity organization society. Every appeal must be patiently and courteously listened to, whether the appeal is answered in the way the applicant is seeking or not. The community must be sure that there is somebody whose business it is to hear and judge, and apply the remedy to every situation of want."

Expression of Conscience. Charity organization is an expression of the corporate conscience and kindness, and, let me add, of the corporate sagacity of the community. As long as we solicit money for our work we belong to the community and must work under the direction and correction of the community.

"It is a service to the community and a help to us in our work when citizens make suggestions and requests of the largest efficiency which our means make possible."

"It is probable that there are many individuals in the city giving to people who are well known to us. If you are helping people whom you sometimes feel you know too little about, why not ask us? If you have no particular personal interest in someone who applies to you for help, why not ask us to find out something about the situation before you give aid?"

"One of our large problems is the drift of people from the plantations to the city. These people constitute a large part of our applicants. They are not at all fitted for city life and in most cases should never have left the plantations."

"There is no work for them here. Here their children do not have food enough to grow properly on, and must grow up with enfeebled bodies. They are constantly well the ranks of the constantly growing army of unemployed, plantation laborers and their families feel the lure of the city, its sights and sounds, its supposed advantages. In most cases it presents no advantages to them; on the contrary, disadvantages. We are constantly trying to persuade such families to return to the plantations, and often with considerable success."

"How to stop this drift to the city is a matter which should receive from every one all the attention that can be paid to it. There are some people in the city who are not fit for plantation work, who have been sifted out of plantation life for that reason. They are not fit for any kind of life but to become beggars. They often try the very last bit of our wits. There are people who will not work and who have little children dependent on them. It is difficult to feed the children without feeling a lazy bulk of a man. It is difficult to prove in court that he will not work. There are some who have inherited the laziness of the ages."

"It takes time, and it takes skill and wisdom and patience of a high order to do this work, and not hurt dependent people, and not hurt the community. Last month we had 175 families under our care. Does the average citizen realize how much personal attention and personal service that involves? Relief given to dependent people, unless it is accompanied by much personal service, is worse than useless, is mediaeval."

The report of Rudolph Buchly, treasurer, showed that the receipts for the fiscal year, from January 1, 1915, to January 1, 1916, amounted to $39,262.75. This included money received from the Irwin and Bishop estates, investments, the city and county contribution of $800, and other contributions. The same report showed the disbursements for the period to be $37,248.67, including investment of the Irwin donation and the transfer of funds to interest-bearing certificates, as well as checks drawn on the treasurer. This left a balance on hand on December 31, 1915, of $2014.08.

During the meeting, seven directors were to be elected for terms of three years each, to succeed John R. Galt, A. D. Castro, A. F. Wall, W. F. Dillingham, T. M. Church, Mrs. A. C. Alexander and Mrs. W. D. Westervelt. Reports of the auditor, executive committee and board of directors also were to be presented, the two last named reports to deal largely with the number of meetings held and the business transacted.

VISITOR URGES BETTER LOOKING STREET LIGHTS

"And Eliminate Petty Politics," Says H. J. Whitley at Commercial Club Luncheon

H. J. Whitley of Los Angeles believes that the people of Honolulu can afford to spend money for better looking electric lights on the streets.

He believes that this city has a great many possibilities for beautifying, and the people of all classes can afford to spend the money to secure the development of such features. Mr. Whitley believes that the leaders of the sugar industry should cooperate with the people of smaller means to gain such improvement for the city, because, he says, the sugar men and the men of large means need the assistance and cooperation of the smaller men just as much as the small men need money and sugar.

Eliminate Small Politics. Mr. Whitley believes that people of the city of Honolulu should get together for the elimination of petty small factional politics and work together for the upbuilding of the city as a whole. He says this will pay.

This and much more that was interesting and instructive was included in the talk made by Mr. Whitley at the Commercial Club luncheon this noon. He told of the construction of concrete roads in the city of Los Angeles and in the state of California. He believes in a city bonding itself for improvements, and seeing that the money is spent properly.

A round of applause greeted Mr. Whitley's remarks when he said that the people of Honolulu should support the Great Northern steamship enterprise, as it was bringing to the city just what the city needs. There was also distinct enthusiasm when he urged his hearers, who included the city engineer and the mayor of the city, to cut out petty politics and strive for the best results for the city as a whole.

EXPECTS FORTY MILLION TO BE MINIMUM FLOW

Average From Waiahole Tunnel Should Be 70,000,000 Gallons Daily, Jorgensen Says

That two months more will see the completion of the entire Waiahole project is the statement made this morning by Jorgen Jorgensen, contractor, who says that the work is rapidly nearing an end.

"When the feed tunnels are turned in from Kahana, Waiahole and Waiuan, says Jorgensen, "I look for a minimum flow of 40,000,000 gallons a day. The average ought to be 70,000,000 gallons for each 24 hours, if we take into consideration the large amounts of water that will come through in the wet seasons."

"Our feed tunnels tap living streams which flow all the year round," he says.

Cement work, according to the contractor, is now practically finished, except for the floors of the north side tunnels which are to be turned into the main bore. Four miles on the outside, toward the plantations which are to be irrigated by the system, are already completed.

Mr. Jorgensen left this morning for the tunnel, going by automobile to the Waiahole side. He will return to town this afternoon.

Some capitalists of the United States are now projecting a hog ranch and packing house on 20,000 acres of land in Pinar del Rio province, about sixty miles from Havana. It is proposed to commence with a capital of $250,000.
